

FACULTY BOOK CELEBRATIONS!

Please join us

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 2010,

to celebrate the publication of

A Dictionary of English and Swahili Equivalent Proverbs

by

HAMISI BABUSA

Visiting International Lecturer, Modern Languages

The event begins at 4:30

with an introduction by

MATT CAROTENUTO

SPONSORED BY THE
CENTER FOR TEACHING & LEARNING
62 PARK STREET

REFRESHMENTS SERVED

English and Swahili have become international languages which are spoken and taught all over the world. Learning a language without its culture can make one have some problems communicating to native speakers of that language. This book synthesizes English and Swahili cultures by comprehensively analysing and interpreting the equivalent proverbs found in both languages. The proverbs from the two cultures were analysed alphabetically with their meanings and uses. This dictionary is a valuable tool to all Scholars of African Studies, African Languages, African Literature and African Anthropology. Additionally, the book can be used by Scholars of English Language and Literature. Further, the book can be used by tourists who want to use Swahili proverbs in their communications. The book, can also be used by Swahili Speakers who want to learn English proverbs.

Hamisi Babusa

Hamisi Babusa

Hamisi Babusa

Hamisi O. Babusa (pictured) is a Lecturer of Swahili Language and Literature and a (PhD) Doctoral candidate at Kenyatta University, Kenya. Currently, he is lecturing Swahili at St. Lawrence University, Canton, New York. Dr. Martin C. Mjoroge (Editor) is a Lecturer in the Department of English & Linguistics, Kenyatta University, Kenya.

ENGLISH AND SWAHILI EQUIVALENT PROVERBS

A DICTIONARY OF ENGLISH AND SWAHILI EQUIVALENT PROVERBS

9 783639 165203

978-3-639-16520-3